By Associated Press.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, July 28.—A mob [illegible] Haitians today removed Vilbrun Guillaume, president of Haiti, from the French Legation, which he took refuge yesterday, and shot him to death in front of the building. [illegible] followed immediately the [illegible] of the [illegible] political prisoners who were massacred [illegible] President Guillaume.

[illegible]

M. Guillaume was dragged from the legation [illegible] with imprecation until he was shot to death. Even then the anger of the people was not appeased. His body was mutilated and tied to the end of a rope and dragged through the streets.

The people are in a state of intense excitement. The arrival of the American cruiser Washington with Rear Admiral Caperton on board is expected at any moment. The Washington has been on the north coast of Haiti. M. Girard was counting on the coming of a cruiser to afford protection to the legation.

NO MEXICAN MOVE.

President Will Decide Course on Return to Washington.

By Associated Press.

CORNISH, July 28.—President Wilson has not yet decided the next step in his Mexican policy. Word to this effect came from the President today in answer to questions submitted to him on the Mexican situation. He informed newspaper men that since his arrival at the summer White House he had not received any new data on the Mexican situation from Secretary Lansing and that the secretary had not forwarded any recommendations as to what should be done.

The President did not deny that one step would be taken in the near future as announced at the State Department.

NEGRO STREET WORKER IS KILLED BY FALL OF DIRT

Charles Stewart Crushed to Death While Working in Ditch on South Pittsburg Street.

While working in a ditch at the end of South Pittsburg street, Charles Stewart of Davidson, [illegible] years old and colored, was killed yesterday afternoon when 12 feet of earth caved in burying him beneath it. Stewart was one of a gang of men employed by Contractors [illegible] & Cornish of Uniontown in [illegible] a sewer under a hill at the extreme end of South Pittsburg street. In order to lay the sewer it was found necessary to tunnel under a large cliff, going in some places 10 feet deep. Stewart was working in the ditch about 12 feet below the surface when the earth caved in.

Immediately after the accident other workmen removed Stewart from beneath the mass of earth and stone. In the meantime two physicians had been summoned but Stewart was dead when removed from the sewer.

The body was removed to Funeral Director J. L. Sims establishment and was later removed to the Stewart home at Davidson. His widow and two children survive. An inquest into his death will be held this evening at J. L. Sims office by Coroner H. J. Bell.

OIL STRIKE IS OVER

Bayonne Men Return to Work at Plants There.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 28.—The strike at the Bayonne plant of the Standard Oil and Tidewater Oil companies ended today when virtually every man who walked out 10 days ago returned to work.

The plants of the Vacuum Oil and General Chemical companies which were closed during the rioting in which three strikers were killed also resumed operations today.

The strike at the Eagle Oil Company plant at Craven Point, Jersey City, by which [illegible],000 men were affected ended today when all but 60 of the employes returned to work.

The Eagle company is a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company and the employes were told they would receive the same terms to be offered the men at the Bayonne plant of the Standard Oil Company.

ARRANGE SCHEDULE FOR THE SPECIALS ON BIG PICNIC DAY

One of the Trains Will Start From Dunbar for Patrons There.

DOWN THE LINE STOPS, TOO

Committee Will Meet Tomorrow to Make Up Further Plans for the Merchants' & Manufacturers' Outing to Olympia Park on August 11th.

Arrangements have been made by C. A. Crowley, chairman of the committee in charge of the Merchants & Manufacturers outing on August [illegible] to have the first section of the special train start from Dunbar at [illegible] A. M. and leave here at [illegible]. This section will also stop at Dawson, Smithton and West Newton [illegible] and all sections will stop at these places returning.

Dunbar promised to join in the picnic if traffic arrangements could be made for a train to and from that town. As this has been done it is expected that the crowd that leaves for Olympia Park will be very much larger. Dawson, Vanderbilt, Dickerson Run, Smithton and West Newton are also expected to furnish a delegation of considerable size.

The first section of the special will leave the Baltimore & Ohio station at [illegible] the second at [illegible] and the last at 8 to o'clock. Tickets are selling rapidly, members of the committee stated today.

It was announced today that all of the merchants on the east side of the river had agreed to close for the picnic. The committee was working on the West Side today, seeking to have the merchants there close their stores the entire day and join in the outing. Manufacturers are also to be requested to close.

The Business & Professional Men's Credit Association will meet tomorrow night to discuss matters relative to the picnic and to take up the credit end of the association which has been neglected somewhat of late, owing to the press of other business.

ARREST SHIP STEWARD

Charge Kroonland's Officer With Mutiny.

By Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28.—Junius Spencer Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan, with his bride and party came ashore here today from the steamer Kroonland which brought a number of persons from New York by way of the Panama Canal.

A squad of police met the Kroonland and arrested a steward charged with mutiny. Five [illegible] report that a special guard had been detailed for Mr. Morgan. Police officials said there was nothing to this report.

J. H. [illegible] arrived in Connellsville today to begin work on the annual edition of his Connellsville-Uniontown directory. He will be located here for the next several weeks or until the volume is published.

Mr. [illegible] has been issuing his directory for a good many years past. It is a good directory, too. As usual, it will be printed by The Courier.

Admitted to Hospital.

Emory Gallatin of Davidson, 39 years old, was admitted this morning to the Cottage State Hospital for treatment.

MOURNING CLOTHES LEGITIMATE PART OF FUNERAL EXPENSES

Judge Work So Rules in Dispute Over Account of a Uniontown Executrix.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, July 28.—Allowing a bill of $[illegible] for the purchase of mourning clothes, Judge [illegible] of the orphans court in an opinion handed down this morning overruled the exceptions [illegible] account of Executrix Margaret A. McCormick, widow of Caleb [illegible] McCormick, who died in Uniontown November 12, 1908. The mourning clothes in question were purchased [illegible] the testator [illegible] said that the purchase of mourning clothes was a [legitimate] funeral expense and should be allowed. [illegible] were also allowed.

[illegible] the executrix had failed to account for rents received from certain real estate held by the deceased, the court held that the intention of the testator was that the income from the real estate was to be divided equally among the six children and the widow until the youngest child reached the age of 21 when a division of the property was to be made. The executrix was ordered to account for rents received since the death of testator.

The will in question was dated November 12, 1908, the same day the testator died. In the first account of the estate the executrix stated receipts from personal property at $[illegible] and expenses at $[illegible], leaving a balance due the executrix of $[illegible]. In January, 1911, the executrix obtained an order from the court to raise by mortgage on certain real estate $4,000 to liquidate the debts of the estate. On February 19, 1914, Rose McCormick, widow of Charles K. McCormick, a son of the deceased, filed exceptions to the account with which the court ruled this morning as dealt with.

Caleb J. McCormick left six children, Charles K. McCormick, Albert McCormick, Violet McCormick, Harry McCormick, Arthur McCormick and Madeline McCormick, the latter a minor, and Margaret A. McCormick, his widow.

DISCUSS PAVING CLAIMS

County Viewers Take Testimony in West Side Dispute.

County Viewers H. C. May and W. H. Binns heard testimony this morning in the former's office here regarding the assessment of paving costs against residents of Baldwin avenue and Vanderbilt avenue. Various residents appeared before the board in an effort to determine the method of assessment, whether according to benefit or by the foot-front rule. No schedule has as yet been prepared as the board will secure all possible data before making a report.

The cost of these improvements is to be assessed entirely against the abutting property owners. The board will adjudicate claims for damages by reason of paving and grading as well as the paving cost.

By the foot front rule each property owner pays according to the size of his lot, but according to benefits the board decides which properties are most improved and enhanced in value by the paving and levies accordingly.

TOO LATE FOR HEARING

Hays Fails to Appear in Time to Reclaim His $35 Forfeit.

John Hays, who was arrested after a strenuous struggle by Patrolman A. A. Geller Monday night during which the policeman's trousers were torn beyond repair and Hays' head torn sufficient to require 13 stitches, did not appear for a hearing this morning. Hays arrived at 8:15 o'clock, after the mayor had left the police station. He was accompanied by Councilman John Duggan, who had posted a $35 forfeit to secure Hays' release from jail.

Whether the entire forfeit will stand or just enough for a fine and the cost of new trousers for the officer will be decided by Mayor Marietta. Hays has taken the pledge for a year.

LOSES FINGER IN SAW.

Local Man Severely Hurt at Lambert Works.

Matthew Widmer, [illegible] years old, of 110 West Gibson avenue had one of the fingers of his left hand cut off and his thumb severely mangled when he fell into a circular saw at the H. C. Frick Coke Company's works at Lambert. He will be unable to work for several weeks.

Widmer was engaged in sawing [illegible] and when he slipped and fell forward his hand being thrust into the teeth of the rapidly revolving saw. The first finger of his left hand was completely severed and the thumb was badly cut.

ARREST VILLA CONSUL.

Charged With Recruiting Men in the United States.

LAREDO, Tex., July 28.—Manuel De [illegible] Villa consul here, was arrested today by United States authorities charged with the violation of the neutrality laws in having recruited men for Mexican service.

After an examination he was released on $[illegible],000 bond. The warrant charged he sent men to Eagle Pass, where they were arrested by military authorities.

Mexico City Cut Off.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Mexico City was still cut off from the outside world today and Secretary Lansing said efforts to get first hand information of conditions had failed.

PLAN PERMANENT SOCIETY HERE TO HOLD CHAUTAUQUA

Regular Organization to be Effected at a Meeting Monday.

E. C. HIGBEE TAKES THE LEAD

Named Temporary President at an Informal Gathering of 30 Which Meets After the Close of the Week's Redpath-Brockway Program in the Tent.

An association to guarantee the return of the Redpath-Brockway Chautauqua to Connellsville in 1916 will be formed at a meeting of all persons interested in the matter Monday night in the high school building. After the close of the last entertainment of the [illegible] course last night, a group of about 30 men remained and formed a temporary organization with Attorney E. C. Higbee as temporary president and [illegible] Moore as temporary secretary. This will be the nucleus of a larger organization which is intended to work toward making Chautauqua a permanent feature here.

So far 107½ pledges for tickets have been made for next year. Prior to last night 27½ had been pledged and during the intermission last night 133½ were added. The bureau requires 750 pledges to guarantee the Chautauqua's return, so 343 must still be made. It was stated that the only pledges for five tickets each had come from Dunbar.

Among those who remained for the after meeting last night were J. L. Schick, Grant Myers, Paul H. Beighley, R. P. Hyatt, E. C. Higbee, E. C. Moore, J. W. McClaren, R. S. Matthews, J. L. Gans, W. S. Behanna, W. E. Kenney, R. C. Beerbower, H. G. May, W. D. McGinnis, A. C. Oglevee, C. W. McClelland, P. A. Kail, O. R. Carpenter, J. R. Workman, E. G. Hall, A. O. Bixler, L. V. Kaplan, H. O. Kelly, J. P. Engliska, B. J. Smith, W. P. Bowen, Joseph McConnell, J. H. Wilkins and D. E. Williams.

Attorney E. C. Higbee made an appeal for ticket pledges at the meeting last night. He expressed his unqualified approval of the Chautauquas as they are conducted and declared it would be a regrettable move to allow Connellsville to be dropped from the circuit.

Rev. C. D. Reed, the superintendent, expressed his appreciation of the treatment accorded him and his crew and the lecturers and entertainers of the course.

The big tent and equipment was taken down and packed up by the crew last night and shipped to Homestead on a morning train. The Homestead Chautauqua will open on Friday.

The closing concert by the Weber Male Quartet was one of the finest of the week. Four such talented entertainers have seldom been heard here before. Their solo, duet and ensemble singing was all that could be desired. Their versatility, each man being a musician as well as a singer, assisted them in presenting an entire entertainment without assistance for accompaniments or obligatos. The audience was insistent for encores and the quartet was generous in giving them.

HAS IMPORTANT CASE

Former Connellsville Man Defending Big Patent Suit.

Clarence A. Williams, a former resident of Connellsville but who for the past 25 years has resided in Pittsburg, was a visitor to town today. Mr. Williams is a patent attorney associated with John H. Roney and Senator John S. Weller.

Yesterday Mr. Williams appeared before Judge Charles P. Orr in the United States district court and argued for the defense in the injunction proceedings brought against the Allegheny county commissioners and Booth & Flinn by the Warren Brothers Company.

This is a big case involving the rights of the plaintiff company to "Warrenite" a road composition. The plaintiffs seek to restrain Booth & Flinn from making roads by a method they claim is covered by their patent on "Warrenite."

Mr. Williams for the commissioners and contractors refuted this claim. He showed that Booth & Flinn are using a greater percentage of bitumen with their crushed stone than has ever been used in "Warrenite" and attacked the claims of the Warren Brothers Company that their process is being infringed on or that it is superior to other methods of paving that have undergone the test of time. "Warrenite" is made by mixing the stone and bitumen and then applying it. Booth & Flinn are laying the stone in layers and topping it with bitumen, making the mix afterwards by constant rolling.

The case is important in that should the Warren Brothers Company be upheld they would have a virtual monopoly of the entire business of constructing roads by the use of crushed stone and asphalt.

Some Young Deer.

Mountaineers say that the herd of deer placed in the mountains some months ago by the state has been increased by the arrival of a number of fawns.

Will Buy Fire Truck.

The South Brownsville fire department has decided to purchase an automobile truck.

MINERS' FIRST AID MEET

Will Be Held This Year at Boswell on September 4.

The Somerset County Miners' First Aid Meet, which has heretofore been held at Somerset, will be held this year at Boswell on September 4. This will give opportunity to a much larger number of miners to attend the meet.

There have been fifteen teams lined up as follows: Consolidation Coal Company [illegible] Shaft No. [illegible] Farmers and [illegible] Merchants Coal Company [illegible] Jenner [illegible] Coal Company, Jerome [illegible] Coal Company, Ralphton [illegible] Coal Company, Hoss[illegible] Brothers [illegible] Company, MacDonald [illegible] and [illegible] Ross Coal Company at Boswell.

There will be a one man event, two man event and three man event and the full team contests. Rules and discounts will be similar to those of last year.

A number of teams have been in training and there is a new demand for a contest for full teams and for teams of less [illegible] mining towns.

Prizes will be offered as heretofore and the American Mine Safety Association and the American National Red Cross are co-operating and will give their medals and certificates to the winners.

An expert from the United States Bureau of Mines will aid in training the men before the meet occurs.

This meet as in the past will be held under the auspices of the Mining Department of the State Young Men's Christian Association of Pennsylvania. The local committee in charge of the Somerset First Aid Meet are J. W. Cunningham, State Mine Inspector, Somerset; Samuel Steinbach, Somerset; Richard Maize [illegible]; John Gibson, Jr., Boswell; Ralph Zimmerman, Ralphton. It is not too late for other teams to enter.

has it in any manner discriminated between that organization and the Business Men's Credit Association. It has a membership in both. It has merely suggested that it is time for Connellsville business men through some organized effort to try to advance the city industrially and commercially. The News should not be critical of such a suggestion.

As for the remark of the Uniontown organ it is only a display of ill-tempered ill-nature which is probably not worth mentioning save as an example of little journalism.

In a controversy between a West Side man and a policeman the former sustained damages which necessitated thirteen stitches in his scalp but the dignity of the law was injured beyond stitching.

There may be no hurry about it but there is no question of the propriety of preparedness on the part of the United States. The tariff policy of the Democratic party is not its only failure.

SCOTTDALE FORMS CHAUTAUQUA CLUB WITH 75 MEMBERS

And Expects to Reach at Least 100 by Coming Season.

THE OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

W. H. Glasgow Named as President and Miss Katherine S. Bomber as Secretary; Family Reunion Takes Near Birthday of Anniversary.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, July 28.—At a well attended meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, about a third of the number present being women, a Chautauqua organization was formed with a membership of 75 members, and the expectation that this will be increased to at least 100 members before the next season comes around. Truman C. Cheeseman, of the Chautauqua which closed here Monday evening, called the meeting to order and Dr. H. D. Allen, pastor of the Baptist Church, was named for temporary chairman and outlined the course of the meeting. It was moved that a permanent organization be formed, with those who have signed pledges, and the following were elected officers of the Chautauqua: President, Walter H. Glasgow; secretary, Miss Katherine S. Bomber; vice president, Dr. James C. Brickler [illegible] Rev. [illegible] Hutchinson; treasurer, J. M. Zimmers.

The Chautauqua presented an excellent program here and it seems a general desire that it be brought back next season. The Y. M. C. A. lecture course this year, always a great entertainment feature of the winter, has been bought from the Redpath-Brockway Bureau, which is at the Chautauqua here, so that will be of high quality. The lecture course does not make any money, being put on as an educational feature. Any surplus made is used for talent the following season.

FAMILY REUNION.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Crise gathered at the old homestead near Alverton, on [illegible] Wednesday, for a reunion, and this was the first time that all were at home since the death of their son, Orville E. Crise, nine years ago. The parents received a number of valuable gifts which were much appreciated [illegible] Mrs. Crise's birthday anniversary having been the day previous and that of Mr. Crise on the Friday following. The day was spent in a very pleasant manner and a delightful lunch served at noon and evening. During the afternoon a number of pictures were taken by J. W. Snyder of Conn Bellie.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. William L. Crise of Alverton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Williams and family, Misses Bertha and Mildred, and Earl and Francis of West Newton; Mr. and Mrs. William J. McCormick and daughters, Misses Edna, Cora, Grace, Catherine, Lillian and Nellie Belle, and sons William, Francis and Harry, of Dickerson Run; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Marsh and family, Miss Catherine and Ralph and Russell L., of West Newton; Mr. and Mrs. William R. Snyder, of Scottdale; Mr. and Mrs. John Brown and sons, William, John, James, Charles and Paul, of Scottdale; Russell W., Misses Hazel and Ethel Crise at home, and C. A. [illegible] of Alverton.

NOTES.

CHILDREN SHOULD WORK

Judge Reppert Does Not Believe in Idleness for Youth.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, July 27.—In five cases before the juvenile court this morning before Judge E. H. Reppert, four cases were disposed of. Judge Reppert made some [illegible] to the directors as to the method of handling the children's home. In the case of [illegible], a small youngster, it was shown that he was 15 years old, it was [illegible] and that [illegible] he did not [illegible] regular employment, and [illegible] only exercise consisted of [illegible].

"Every child should be given employment," said Judge Reppert "even the child of a millionaire should have work to do." The Gray boy was placed on a Mill Run farm recently, but ran away from there. He was remanded to the county farm with the warning that the next time proper evidence of incorrigibility be brought against him he would be sent to the reformatory.

The case of Catherine Hardin, aged 16, also of the county home, who, it was claimed, disobeyed the rules and circulated stories about the employes, was continued until next Tuesday, and the prosecution arranges its evidence.

Alex Cain, aged 15, charged with incorrigibility, was committed to Morganza.

June Mardis, aged 16, of Dunbar, charged with the theft of $20.60, was released to the custody of her parents, under supervision of the parole officer.

In almost every neighborhood some one has died from an attack of cholera morbus before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. Every family should be prepared for such an emergency. Mrs. E. M. Snyder, Herkimer, N. Y., says, "About four years ago my husband had an attack of cholera morbus. I gave him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and it relieved the pain immediately, and two or three doses of it effected a cure." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

At the Theatres

SOISSON THEATRE.

"FOR KING AND COUNTRY."—Princess Knapoli and A. A. Capozzi are the star features in the six reel romantic drama, "For King and Country." It is a beautiful play of the Servian court and is filled with exciting scenes and romantic adventures. "The Pieter Lang," a two reel Bison drama, is an Irish play with Gene Gauntier and Jack Clark in the leading roles. "The Joker comedy, "Bobby Bumps Gets Pa's Goat," is one of the funniest farces yet presented. The Animated Weekly has quite a number of instructive scenes that are highly interesting. Tomorrow the third episode of the popular serial, "The Diamond From the Sky," with Irving Cummings and Lottie Pickford will be the attraction.

GLOBE THEATRE.

"THE GODDESS."—The fourth part of "The Goddess," the beautiful serial presenting Earle Williams, Anita Stewart and other popular Vitagraph stars, is the principal attraction today at the Globe Theatre. In each chapter two reels are shown. "Prejudice," a Kalem drama in three acts with Tom Moore and Marguerite Courtot and "Done In Wax," an Essanay comedy, completes the bill. Tomorrow "The Eastbrook Case," a three act drama of absorbing interest, featuring Julia Swayne Gordon and Charles Kent, will be shown.

To the Voters of Fayette County.
(Political Advertisement.)

I kindly ask you—the 6,125 voters who voted for me for Judge in 1909 and all other voters—not to commit yourselves to any one for Judge until you know and realize what is involved in this campaign for that office.

I shall tell you, during the campaign, of some things that mean dollars and cents to every one as a tax payer, many dollars and cents to some; I shall tell you of some matters that involve the most sacred rights of us as citizens of a free country, of some matters most vital to the welfare of every man, woman and child of our county, all of which ought to be considered by you in making your choice.

Political standards will never be higher, political conditions in our county never better, than the methods used by our judges in being elected, never higher or better than our judges demand. The campaign will open soon. Sincerely yours, A. E. JONES.

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—Mrs. THOMSON, 649 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Forty-ninth Reunion of Veterans to Be Held In September.

BLUE LINES GROWING THIN

Col. John McElroy, Past Senior Vice Commander in Chief, One of the Best Posted Men on the Civil War, Is Compiling a Roster of the Noted Figures Who Will Be Present.

By J. WALTER MITCHELL,
National Patriotic Instructor, United Spanish War Veterans

Clad in a reception gown of red, white and blue, Washington will welcome the time worn survivors of the once powerful legions of Grant and Sherman, Meade and Sheridan at the forty-ninth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and the fiftieth anniversary of the grand review the week beginning Sept. 27. In the hurly burly of patriotism at Washington on that history making occasion will be many conspicuous characters of the greatest war in the preceding century.

Colonel John McElroy, past senior vice commander in chief of the G. A. R., who is regarded by his comrades as a veritable living encyclopedia of the civil war, its men and events, is compiling a roster of the noted figures of the sixties who are expected to attend the big encampment. It is interesting to note in this connection that the two surviving corps commanders of the civil war, Major General Grenville M. Dodge of Council Bluffs, Ia., and Judge General James H. Wilson of Wilmington, Del., are expected to be present. General Dodge commanded the noted Sixteenth corps. General Wilson commanded all the cavalry between the Alleghany mountains and the Mississippi river. Details of his fine cavalry sweep down through Alabama and Mississippi at the close of the war and I captured Jefferson Davis.

Major General Osterhaus Coming.

At the head of the list of division commanders is Major General Peter Joseph Osterhaus, who has been living for many years at Mannheim, Germany. At the time of the encampment of the G. A. R. he will go to Washington to visit his son, Admiral Uno Osterhaus, U. S. N., retired, and will greet his old comrades of fifty years ago. General Osterhaus stood among the splendid foreign officers who came to this country to serve the cause of the Union.

Another noted division commander who is expected to greet his former soldiers at the encampment is Major General David McM. Gregg, who is auditor general of Pennsylvania. He commanded with great credit one of Sheridan's cavalry divisions.

Major General Adelbert Ames, who commanded a division of the Tenth corps, distinguishing himself at Fort Fisher, and who was afterward governor of Mississippi and later senator from that state, is living in retirement in Massachusetts and is expected to attend the encampment.

Others who are on the roster of prospective visitors are Admiral George Dewey, who was one of Admiral Farragut's young officers, gaining distinction in the attack upon Port Hudson; Major General Nelson A. Miles, who entered the service as first lieutenant and became colonel of the Sixty-first New York volunteers and who as a brigade commander delivered at Sunderlands Station, Va., the momentous blow that cut General Lee's last railroad connection and compelled the surrender of Petersburg and Richmond; Admiral Colby M. Chester, a young officer of Farragut's squadron; Lieutenant General S. B. M. Young, who rose from an enlisted man to be colonel and brevet brigadier general and then entered the regular army, being retired in 1901 with the rank of lieutenant general, and is now governor of the United States Soldiers' home at Washington.

One Veteran Still In Service.

Colonel John L. Clem, quartermaster corps, U. S. army, the only survivor of the civil war now on the active list of the army, is stationed at Washington, and is taking a lively interest in the arrangements for the forty ninth encampment of the G. A. R. Colonel Clem was baptized in the fire of battle as a drummer boy in the sanguinary contest at Shiloh. He had many thrilling experiences, and because of his undaunted valor in the "hornets' nest" at Chickamauga Generals Rosecrans and Thomas bestowed upon him the title "Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," which he proudly wears to this day. Prior to the battle of Chickamauga he wore the cognomen, "Johnny Shiloh."

Another drummer boy of the civil war who will be present is Abraham Springsteen, who was but ten years of age when he entered the service. He will have charge of a drum, fife and bugle corps of boy sons and grandsons of Union veterans in the grand review at the G. A. R. encampment.

Major General J. Warren Keifer of Ohio has promised to attend the encampment. He wore the double stars of his rank in two wars and is still active. He commanded a brigade and division in the Eighth Sixth corps in the civil war and was commander of a division of the Seventh army corps in the war with Spain. General Keifer served several terms in congress and was one time speaker of the house of representatives.

How Did You Die?

Did you tackle that trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?

Oh, a trouble is a ton or a trouble is an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only—how did you take it?

You are beaten to earth? Well, well, what's that?
Come up with a smiling face
It's nothing against you to fall down flat,
But to lie there—that's disgrace.

The harder you're thrown, why, the higher you bounce;
Be proud of your blackened eye!
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts;
It's how did you fight—and why?

And though you've been done to the death, what then?
If you battled the best you could;
If you played your part in the world of men,
Why, the Critic will call it good.

Death comes with a crawl or comes with a pounce;
And whether he's slow or spry,
It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts,
But only—how did you die?

—Edmund Vance Cooke.

AUGUST WILL SEE AUTO MAIL SERVICE ON BIG SCALE.

Minimum Length of the Runs Will Be Fifty Miles.

Rural mail service by automobile will begin on a large scale Aug. 2, says a statement just issued by the postoffice department. Thereafter, under orders thus far signed by Postmaster General Burleson, 105 machines carrying mail will traverse more than 3,500 miles of rural post roads daily except Sunday.

The first dispatch of rural mails by auto was made July 1. Two pioneer routes radiating from Quarryville, Pa., the one 55.1 and the other 50.8 miles long, went into operation on that date. Additional orders are pending, providing for numerous other motor routes, and it is probable that many more will be approved in time to become effective in August.

Preparatory to the introduction of this service wherever it will be advantageous to the rural public, surveys of special needs and conditions in every state are being made. Rapid increase of automobile mileage in the R. F. D. is certain during the coming fiscal year. Prospects are that the rural mail auto will soon be as familiar in the great farming sections of the country as the present bookish rural carrier's wagon. Where roads are good the automobile promises to effect a huge economy of time and labor and vastly to enlarge the postal facilities of the districts served.

The auto routes thus far authorized are apportioned as follows: Oklahoma, 11; Georgia, 2; California, 10; Texas, 8; Florida, 3; Pennsylvania, 2; Louisiana, 1. By law the minimum length of such routes is fixed at fifty miles. Thus far the longest route authorized involves nearly sixty-three miles of daily travel.

Up to date the number of families to be served by each of the above routes varies from a minimum of 130 to a maximum of 470. The average throughout the service, it is expected, will be about 300. It does not follow that the auto mail carrier must make a stop for each family on his line. Frequently rural mail boxes are located in groups or "nests," so that one stop suffices for several. It is seldom that the carrier has mail for every patron, and few farmers mail a letter or a parcel every day. Uncle Sam's auto service is to be strictly an express service.

HAS INVISIBLE SUBMARINE.

Inventor Wants Patent to Inclose Undersea Fighters in Looking Glass.

After conducting experiments on a nearby lake for several months Patrick Keenan of Denver has applied for a patent on an invention which he calls an "invisible submarine."

Keenan's idea is to clothe the portion of the submarine above the surface with a mirror which will reflect only the water beneath it and at a distance of a few yards would give the appearance of the sea.

He applies his invention to the periscope by clothing it in a glass tube, silvered inside, forming a mirror which renders the whole invisible.

If it is desired the decks can be similarly clad in silvered plate glass, and the submarine on the surface would be invisible at a far shorter distance than the range of the modern torpedo.

The Colossus of Rhodes.

The reunion of the Colossus of Rhodes have been dispersed beyond possibility of recovery or even of tracing. It stood for little more than half a century and then, in 224 B. C., was overthrown by an earthquake. The Rhodians raised from benevolent outsiders large sums of money for its restoration, but divided the fund among themselves, asserting that the oracle of Delphi had forbidden them to set it up again. So there the ruin lay until 672 A. D., when the Saracens sold it to a Jewish merchant, who loaded 900 camels and went away—literally—with the brass.—London Spectator.

A Cruel Comparison.

"I don't make much," said the fond suitor. "My salary is $20 a week. Could we live on that, dear?"

"Ah," sighed the maiden dreamily, "just the price of a tire for father's motorcar."

Then something told the f. s. that he was wasting time.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

COST OF LIVING SOARS ABROAD

Bureau Investigates Conditions In Eighteen Countries.

FOOD SUPPLY CONSERVED.

Price of Flour Shows Biggest Increase In All Countries—Raise Due Mainly to Panic and Uncertainty. Potatoes One of Few Articles That Showed Decrease.

How the cost of living has been increased in Europe by the war is shown in a study just completed by the United States bureau of labor statistics. Its information was gathered through the consular service and covers more than 100 cities, towns and districts over eighteen European countries. A summary says:

"The first effect of the war was the same practically throughout Europe. Its outbreak was followed by a sharp rise in prices, due mainly to panic and uncertainty. In some countries legislative measures were at once taken to check this rise. Within a fortnight the first panic was over, and except in the actual war zone prices began to fall. In most places, however, prices did not drop to the July level, and after an interval again took an upward turn, which has probably not yet reached its climax.

"Potatoes were one of the few articles which showed a fall in price in most of the more important countries. Meat also was another important article which in many places increased but little in price.

Flour Prices Soar.

"Flour showed decided changes. Russia is the greatest wheat exporting country of Europe, and the war practically shut off its foreign markets. The price of wheat flour fell in Moscow. Prices compared with the July level in Germany showed an increase of 25 per cent by December and 34 by January. In Vienna the increase by December was 75 per cent and by January 82 per cent. In Switzerland, the Netherlands and Great Britain flour prices in December were 13 or 14 per cent above the July level, but later figures show a continued increase in February, reaching 24 per cent in the Netherlands and 33 per cent in Great Britain. Bread prices in most cases followed those of wheat flour.

"Administrative and legislative measures to check the rise in cost of necessaries were very generally taken. Denmark, Egypt, Great Britain, Italy, Russia, Spain and Turkey prohibited the export of practically all foodstuffs. France, Norway and Sweden listed certain articles which must not be exported, and Holland placed an embargo on butter and cheese.

Price of Cereals Fixed.

"Austria and Germany prescribed the proportion of wheat or rye flour that should be used in making bread. Later they fixed the wholesale price of cereals and brought the distribution and consumption of flour and bread under strict control.

"An upward movement in prices, prior to the war, had been worldwide. Thus it will be seen that the increased prices directly due to the war, coming as the culmination of a long period of increases, are much more serious to the masses of the population than the mere figures indicate."

WILL WATCH REVENUE MEN.

Flying Squadron of Detectives Investigates Every Office In Country.

A "flying squadron" of special revenue agents to do detective work in various revenue districts for the purpose of uncovering frauds and increasing the efficiency of the service has been organized by Internal Revenue Commissioner Osborne.

A nation wide investigation of every revenue office in the country will be undertaken, and every unfaithful employee will be roundly brought to justice.

It was through the work of a number of similar agents that the oleomargarine frauds which caused a loss of $27,000,000 in revenue to the government were brought to light.

The People of China.

There are about sixty different peoples, or tribes, which go to make up the population of China. Practically nine-tenths of the population is to be found in China proper, the great majority being of the Chinese race. With the exception of a few Iranians and a few people of the hill tribes, all of the Chinese population belongs, physically, to various branches of the great Mongol-Tartar family. The government of the republic recognized five principal races when designing the new flag, which replaces the yellow dragon of the old national ensign with five stripes—crimson, yellow, white, blue and black—symbolical of the five races comprised in the Chinese people, Mongol, Chinese, Manchu, Mohammedan and Tibetan.

Justice.

A Sunday school teacher had been telling her class of little boys about crowns of glory and heavenly rewards for good people.

"Now, tell me," she said at the close of the lesson, "who will get the biggest crown."

There was a silence for a minute or two, then a bright little chap piped out:

"I'm not got t' biggest 'end."—London Tit-Bits.

AN AFTERNOON GOWN.

Dotted Cream Net Makes a Charming Frock For Summer Femininity.

HANDSOME CREATION.

Dotted cream net combined with hello pussy willow taffeta is the material used in this charming afternoon frock. A deep tunic accordion plaited and of irregular length, falls over a plaited foundation of cream colored daphne silk. The tunic is finished with two wide bands of the taffeta. The bodice is simple, crossing in surplice effect with a girdle of taffeta, which ascends in a point very high on the right side. Two points of taffeta also trim the back.

ATTRACTIVE SPORT GARMENT.

Yellow and Blue Striped Silk Sweater With Sash of Self Material.

Nothing is more convenient than the lovely silk sweaters which come in the most brilliant shades imaginable. The one shown in the illustration is of bright yellow and sapphire blue, to be worn by a brunette, whose dark hair and eyes will be doubly beautiful with such a setting.

A plain strip of blue trims the front around the sleeves as cuffs and across the pockets. The sash is finished by blue tassels.

Good on Summer Menus.

A green salad served with cheese, nuts or eggs, and a French dressing with whole wheat sandwiches, can be made the main course for luncheon. A cheese soufflé served with spinach makes meat unnecessary. Beets stuffed with creamed mushrooms and nuts are delightful, and a ring of mashed potatoes filled with creamed carrots and peas will please the most fastidious appetite. A canape, bisque or puree made of fresh vegetables, or a cocktail made of mixed fruits, is a good beginning to either luncheon or dinner. Desserts should be fresh fruits, fruit ices or gelatin dishes.

If your customer loses his patience, you cannot help him to find it by losing your own.—Youth's Companion.

POCKETS AND SASHES ARE WELL LIKED.

Pockets are the proper thing these days, though not always used. The round and square patch pockets are giving place to slot pockets, sometimes back hip pockets in sure enough masculine fashion, while a new patch pocket is cut diagonally in half and stitched along its slanting edge.

Sashes, when they appear, are frequently weighted in various ways. That is why rosettes of the sash ribbon are found on the sash accompanying a French creation recently exhibited.

NINETEEN DECLARATIONS OF WAR IN ONE YEAR.

About a year ago Austria declared war on Servia. Since that day there have been eighteen other declarations of war as follows:

July 28.—Austria against Servia.
Aug. 1.—Germany against Russia.
Aug. 3.—Germany against France.
Aug. 3.—Germany against Belgium.
Aug. 4.—England against Germany.
Aug. 5.—Austria against Russia.
Aug. 6.—Servia against Germany.
Aug. 11.—Montenegro against Austria.
Aug. 11.—Montenegro against Germany.
Aug. 11.—France against Austria.
Aug. 13.—England against Austria
Aug. 23.—Japan against Germany
Aug. 25.—Austria against Japan.
Aug. 28.—Austria against Belgium
Nov. 2.—Russia against Turkey.
Nov. 5.—France against Turkey.
Nov. 6.—England against Turkey.
Nov. 7.—Belgium against Turkey.
Nov. 7.—Servia against Turkey.

May 23.—Italy against Austria.

DO YOUR VERY BEST.

Be Earnest and Thorough and You Are Bound to Succeed.

There is a feature of Dickens' character which cannot be too often or too seriously insisted upon, and that is his intense earnestness and thoroughness in everything he did. He said to me more than once:

"My dear boy, do everything at your best. If you do that neither I nor any one else can find fault with you, even if you fail. For myself, I can honestly say that I have taken as great pains with the smallest thing I ever did as with the biggest."

In giving advice to a young author he said on one occasion:

"If you want your public to believe in what you write you must believe in it yourself. When I am describing a scene I can as distinctly see what I am describing as I can see you now. So real are my characters to me that on one occasion I had fixed upon the course which one of them was to pursue. The character, however, got hold of me and made me do exactly the opposite to what I had intended, but I was so sure that he was right and I was wrong that I let him have his own way."

Whatever he did either in work or at play he always gave of his very best. He hated slackness or half heartedness in any shape or form.—Harper's Weekly.

ODDITIES OF VISION.

Peculiar Optical Effects and the Yellow Spot In the Eye.

If one places a pinhead up close to and directly in front of the eye the head of the pin appears transparent and things may be seen as easily through it as through a sheet of isinglass, the head appearing simply as a large round cloud. If it is placed somewhat closer no pin or head can be seen at all.

If one goes into a very dark room and puts a lighted candle near the side of one eye very pretty and peculiar effects are observed. A tracery, forming a regular network, can be easily detected, and this is merely the shadow thrown by the candle on the retina of the eye of the small capillary blood vessels between the retina and the candle.

If one looks to the side of a dim star in the heavens the star appears a great deal brighter than direct vision makes it appear. This is because the light in the direct view falls on what is known as the "yellow spot" or point of keenest vision. As this is not put directly behind the front of the eye the side glance is necessary. Some people can see stars that way that they cannot perceive at all on direct vision.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A Garrick Incident.

David Garrick, where speaking was concerned, was the pride of London. Members of parliament envied him his powers. Burke envied him. There is that instance in parliament when, during a heated debate, a member moved that the gallery be cleared. This was ordered to be done, and the strangers withdrew, all save Garrick. Still the member objected. Then up spake Burke. Would it be fair to exclude from their debate the master of eloquence, the genius who taught them the art of speaking? he demanded. For himself he was proud to acknowledge his indebtedness to Garrick. Fox followed in the same strain, and Townshend. The house then voted that the "stranger should remain." And Garrick did not budge.—St. James' Gazette.

Soho Square, London.

Soho is perhaps the most curiously derived place name in London. According to Samuel Pegge, the antiquary, Soho square, which has given a name to the district, was first called Monmouth square when the ill fated Duke of Monmouth had a house there. Upon the duke's defeat and execution in 1685 the square was ordered to be called King's square, and a statue of King Charles II. was set up in the middle of it. But the partisans of the Duke of Monmouth, wishing to preserve a distant remembrance of their leader, called it Soho square, from "Soho!" a hunting cry adopted by the duke as his watchword at the battle where he was taken prisoner.—London Saturday Review.

Futility of Argument.

Plato defined man as "a two legged animal without feathers." Diogenes, who heard this, plucked a cock. "This is Plato's man," said he. But never you think the old timer lacked a "comeback." He added to his original definition the words, "With broad flat nails." Such is the futility of argument.—Springfield Republican.

HIS FIRST DRINK AT NINETY-FOUR; HE THEN QUITS.

Smith Guthrie, veteran soldier, went to Oswego, N. Y., from Chemung to see old friends and celebrate the ninety-fourth anniversary of his birth.

At the festivities some one in the party suggested that a little drink might help matters. Guthrie protested that he had never taken a drink in his life, but was finally persuaded to take just a sip for conviviality's sake. Two hours later he was arrested on a charge of intoxication. In police court he took a pledge for the rest of his life and was released under a suspended sentence.

BROOK TROUT.

Science Outdoes Nature In Raising the Young Fish.

The brook trout is a nest builder, but does not belong to the group of fish which cares for its eggs and young. When the function of egg laying is completed and the nest covered with gravel the parent fish seem to feel that their whole duty has been performed, and they depart, leaving both eggs and the young when they are hatched to the care of nature, and nature, it must be confessed, is generally neglectful of her charge.

Early in autumn the mature brook trout in pairs seek the gravelly bottoms of shoals and spring runs. Here with nose and fins they hollow out a shallow basin and make it scrupulously clean. This is their nest, and over the bottom the eggs are scattered, covered with gravel, and their duty to posterity is ended.

Only a small proportion of the eggs deposited naturally are fertilized, and many of these are destroyed by spawn eating fishes. Most of the tiny fish which do develop and succeed in punching a hole through the egg shell with their little tails and emerging into a watery world do so only to find quick lodgment in some larger fish.

As a foster parent the trout culturist is a greater success than Dame Nature. The latter, under the most favorable circumstances, rarely succeeds in hatching more than 10 per cent of the eggs deposited, while the former expects to develop into wiggling fishes nearly 60 per cent of the eggs obtained.

Quarantined.

In one of the little mountain towns of the south a Chautauqua meeting was held last summer for the first time. The fact was advertised for some distance round the town, but the older negroes especially did not understand what it was all about.

Across the front of the little hotel of the village was hung a banner bearing the one word "Chautauqua."

Up to this hotel one day drove an old negro in a one horse wagon containing a few vegetables, which he hoped to sell to the proprietor, as he had done on former occasions. But when he saw the banner with its ominous word he was seized with fright and would not go into the building or even get out of his wagon. When the proprietor appeared the old fellow inquired nervously, "What disease is you all quarantined for, boss?"—Youth's Companion.

The BALL of FIRE

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER and LILLIAN CHESTER

ILLUSTRATED BY C. D. RHODES

"It depends on what you want," [illegible] Arthur Grandin, who, sitting [illegible] the immense Haverman, looked [illegible] that giant had shrunk him by his [illegible] proximity.

"Freight, to begin with," stated Allison, resuming his place at the head of the table, but not his seat. "You gentlemen represent the largest freightage interests in the United States. You all know your relative products, and yet, in order to grasp this situation completely, I wish to enumerate them. Babbitt's National Dairy Products consolidation can swing the shipment of every ounce of butter, cream, cheese, eggs and poultry handled in this country; Clark's Standard Cereal company, wheat, corn, oats, rice, barley, malt, flour, every ounce of breadstuffs or cereal goods grown on American soil; Haverman, the Amalgamated Metals Construction company, every pound of iron, lead and copper, and every ton of ore, from the moment it leaves the ground until it appears as an iron web in a city sky or spans a river; Grandin, the Union Fuel company, coal and wood, from Alaska to Pennsylvania, with oil and all its enormous by-products; Taylor, the American Textiles company, wool, cotton, flax, the raw and finished material of every thread of clothing we wear, or any other textile fabric we use except silks; Vance, the United States Supplies company, meat, sugar, fruit, the main blood and sinew builders of the country. Gentlemen, give me the freightage controlled by your six companies, and I'll toss the rest of the country's freightage to a beggar."

"You forgot Chisholm," Babbitt reminded him, and Banker Chisholm's white mutton-chops turned pink from the appreciation which glowed in his ruddy-veined face.

"Allison was quite right," returned big Haverman with a dry smile. "The freightage income on money is an item scarcely worth considering."

"Give the Atlantic-Pacific this freight, and, inside of two years, the entire business of the United States, with all its ramifications, will be merged in one management, and that management ours. We shall not need to absorb, nor purchase, a single railroad until it is bankrupt."

"Sensible idea, Allison," approved Clark of the Standard Cereal company. "It's a logical proposition which I had in mind years ago."

"Allison's stroke of genius, it seems to me, consists in getting us together," smiled Haverman, hanging his arm over the back of his chair.

Banker Chisholm leaned forward on the table, and stroked his round chin reflectively. "There would be some disorganization, and perhaps financial disorder, in the first two years," he considered; "but the railroads are already harassed too much by the government to thrive under competition, and, in the end, I believe this proposed centralization would be the best thing for the interests of the country," wherein Chisholm displayed that he was a vestryman of Market Square church wherever he went.

"What is your proposition?" asked Grandin, who, because of the self-assertion necessitated by his diminutive size, seemed pompous, but was not. No pompous man could have merged the wood, coal and oil interests, and, having merged them, swung them over his own shoulder.

Allison's answer consisted of one word.

"Consolidation," he said.

There was a moment of silence, while these men absorbed that simple idea, and glanced speculatively, not at Allison, but at each other. They were kings, these heads of mighty corporations, whose emissaries carried their sovereignties into the farthest corners of the earth. Like friendly kings, they had helped each other in the protection of their several domains; but this was another matter.

"That's a large proposition, Ed," stated Vance, very thoughtfully. All sense of levity had gone from this meeting. They had come, as they thought, to promote a large mutual interest, but not to weld a Frankenstein. "I did not understand your project to be so comprehensive. I fancied your idea to be that the various companies represented here, with Chisholm as financial controller, should take a mutual interest in the support of the Atlantic-Pacific, for the purpose of consolidating the railroad interests of the country under one management, thereby serving our own transportation needs."

"Very well put, Vance," approved Taylor, smoothing his pointed mustache.

"That is a mere logical development of the railroad situation," returned Allison. "If I had not cemented this direct route, someone would have made the consolidation you mention within ten years, for the entire railroad situation has been disorganized since the death of three big men in that field; and the scattered holdings would be, and are, an easy prey for anyone vitally interested enough to invade the industry. I have no such minor proposition in mind. I propose, with the Atlantic-Pacific as a nucleus, to, first, as I have said, bring the financial terminals of every mile of railroad in the United States into one central office. With this I then propose to combine the National Dairy Products consolidation, the Standard Cereal company, the Amalgamated Metals Constructive company, the Union Fuel, American Textiles, the United States Supplies, and the stupendous financial interests swayed by the banks tributary to the Majestic Trust company. I propose to weld these gigantic concerns into one corporation, which shall be the mightiest organization the world has ever known. Beginning with the control of transportation, it will control all food, all apparel, all construction materials, all fuel. From the shoes on his feet to the roof over his head, every man in the United States of America, from laborer to president, shall pay tribute to the International Transportation company, Gentlemen. If I have dreamed big, it is because I have dealt with men who deal only in large dreams. What I propose is an empire greater than that ever swayed by any monarch in history. We eight men, who are here in this room, can build that empire with a scratch of a pen, and can hold it against the assaults of the world!"

"I'll Jump on You Tomorrow in the Stock Exchange."

His voice rang as he finished, and Babbitt looked at him in wonder. Allison had always been a strong man, but now, in this second youth, he was an Antaeus springing fresh from the earth. There was a moment's lull, and then a nasal voice drawled into the silence.

"Allison," it was the voice of old Joseph G. Clark, who had built the Standard Cereal company out of one wheat elevator, "who is to be the monarch of your new empire?"

For just a moment Allison looked about him. Vastly different as these men were, from the full-bearded Haverman to the smooth-shaven old Joseph G. Clark, there was some one expression which was the same in every man, and that expression was mastery. These men, by the sheer force of their personality, by the sheer dominance of their wills, by the sheer virility of their purposes, by the sheer dogged persistence which balks at no obstacle and hesitates at no foe, had fought and struggled and throttled their way to the top, until they stood head and shoulders above all the strong men of their respective domains, safe from protest or dispute of sovereignty, because none has risen strong enough to do them battle. They were the undefeated champions of their classes, and the life of every man in that group was an epic! Who was to be monarch of the new empire? Allison answered that question as simply as he had the others.

"The best man," he said.

There had been seven big men in America. Now there were eight. They all recognized that.

"Of course," went on Allison, "my proposition does not assume that any man here will begin by relinquishing control of his own particular branch of the International Transportation company; sugar, beef, iron, steel, oil and the other commodities will all be under their present handling; but each branch will so support and benefit the other that the position of the consolidation itself will be impregnable against competition or the assaults of government. The advantages of control, collection and distribution, are so vast that they far outweigh any possible question of personal aggrandizement."

"Don't hedge, Allison," barked Arthur Grandin. "You expressed it right in the first place. You're putting it up to us to step out of the local championship class, and contend for the big belt."

"The prize isn't big enough," pronounced W. T. Chisholm, as if he had decided for them all. As befitted his calling, he was slower minded than the rest. There are few quick turns in banking.

"Not big enough?" repeated Allison. "Not big enough, when the Union Fuel company already supplies every candle which goes into the Sudan, runs the pumps on the Nile and the motor boats on the Yang-Tse-Kiang, supplies the oil for the lubrication of the car of Juggernaut, and works the propeller of every aeroplane? Not big enough, when already the organizations represented here have driven their industries into every quarter of the earth? What shall you say when we join to our nucleus the great steamship lines and the foreign railroads? Not big enough? Gentlemen, look here!" He strode over to the big globe. From New York to San Francisco a red line had already been traced. Now he took a pencil in his hand, and placing the point at New York, gave the globe a whirl, circling it completely. "Gentlemen, there is your empire!"

Again the nasal voice of old Joseph G. Clark drawled into the silence.

"I suggest that we discuss in detail the conditions of the consolidation," he remarked.

The bell of Allison's house phone rang.

"Mr. Dalrymple, sir," said the voice of Ephraim.

"Very well," replied Allison. "Show him into the study. Babbitt, will you read to the gentlemen this skeleton plan of organization? If you'll excuse me, I'll be back in five minutes."

"Dalrymple?" inquired Taylor.

"Yes," answered Allison abstractedly, and went into the study.

He and Dalrymple looked at each other silently for a moment, with the old enmity shining between them. Dalrymple, a man five years Allison's senior, a brisk speaking man with a protruding jaw and deep-set gray eyes, had done more than any other one human being to develop the transportation systems of New York, but his gift had been in construction, in creation, whereas Allison's had been in combination; and Dalrymple had gone into the railroad business.

"Dalrymple, I'm going to give you a chance," said Allison briskly. "I want the Gulf & Great Lakes Railroad system."

Dalrymple had produced a cigar while he waited for Allison, and now he lit it. He sat on the corner of the study table and surveyed Allison critically.

"I don't doubt it," he replied. "The system is almost completed."

"I'll accept a fair offer for your controlling interest," went on Allison.

"And if I won't sell?"

"Then I'll jump on you tomorrow in the stock exchange, and take it away from you."

Dalrymple smiled.

"You can't do it. I own my controlling interest outright, and no stock gamblings on the board of trade can affect either a share of my stock or the earning capacity of my railroad. When you drove me out of the traction field, I took advantage of my experience and intrenched myself. Go on and gamble."

"I wish you wouldn't take that attitude," returned Allison, troubled. "It looks to you as if I were pursuing you because of that old quarrel; but I want you to know that I'm not vindictive."

"I don't think you are," replied Dalrymple, with infinite contempt. "You're just a damned hog."

A hot flush swept over Allison's face, but it was gone in an instant.

"It happens that I need the new Gulf & Great Lakes system," he went on, in a perfectly level voice; "and I prefer to buy it from you at a fair price."

Dalrymple put on his hat.

"It isn't for sale," he stated.

"Just a minute, Dalrymple," interposed Allison. "I want to show you something. Look in here," and he opened the library door.

Dalrymple stepped to the opening and saw, not merely seven men, middle-aged and past, sitting around a library table, but practically all the freightable necessities of the United States and practically all its money, a power against which his many million dollar railroad system was of no more opposition than a toy train.

"— the transportation department to be governed by a council composed of the representatives of the various other departments herein mentioned," droned on the voice of Babbitt.

The representatives of the various other departments therein mentioned were bent in concentrated attention on every sentence, and phrase, and word, and syllable of that important document, not one of them failing to pay important attention to the points which answered for common, and none looked up. Dalrymple closed the door gently.

"Now will you sell?" inquired Allison.

For a moment the two men looked into each other's eyes, while the old enmity, begun while they were still in the womb of time, lay chill between them. At one instant, Dalrymple, whose jaw muscles were working convulsively, half raised his hands, as if he were minded to fall on Allison and strangle him, and it was not the fact that Allison was probably the stronger man which restrained him, but a bigger pride.

"No," he said, again with that infinite contempt in his tone. "Break me."

"All right," accepted Allison cheerfully, and even with relief, for his way was now free to pursue its normal course. He crossed to the door which opened into the hall, and politely bowed Dalrymple into the guidance of old Ephraim.

"Dalrymple won't sell," he reported, when he rejoined his fellow members of the International Transportation company.

Joseph G. Clark looked up from a set of jotted memoranda which he had been nonchalantly setting down during the reading.

"We'll pick it up in the stock market," he carelessly suggested.

"Can't," replied Allison, with equal carelessness. "He's intrenched with solid control, and I imagine he doesn't owe a dollar."

Chisholm with his fingers in his white mutton chops, was studying clean-shaven old Clark's memoranda.

"A panic will be necessary, anyhow," he observed. "We'll acquire the road then."

CHAPTER XI.

Gail Solves the Vedder Court Problem.

Rev. Smith Boyd, rector of the richest church in the world, dropped his last collar button on the floor, and looked distinctly annoyed. The collar button rolled under his mahogany highboy, and concealed itself carefully behind one of the legs. Rev. Smith Boyd, there being none to see, laid aside his high dignity, and got down on his knees, though not for any clerical purpose, whereat the little collar button shone so brightly that the rector's bulging eye caught the glint of it. His hand swung round, at the end of a long arm, and captured it before it could hide any further, then the young rector withdrew his throbbing head and started to raise up, and bumped the back of his head with a crack on the bottom of an open drawer, near enough to the top to give him a good long sweep for momentum. This mishap being just one degree beyond the point to which Rev. Smith Boyd had been consecrated, he ejaculated as follows:——

No, it is not respectful, nor proper, nor charitable, to set down what Rev. Smith Boyd, in that stress, ejaculated, but a beautiful, gray-haired lady, beautiful with the sweetness of content and the happiness of gratified pride and the kindliness of humor, who had paused at Rev. Smith Boyd's open door to inquire how soon he would be down to dinner, hastily covered her mouth with her hand, and moved away from the door, with moist blue eyes, around which twinkled a dozen tiny wrinkles both of them smiling.

When the dignified young rector came down to dinner, fully clothed and apparently in his right mind, his mother, who was the beautiful gray-haired lady with the twinkling blue eyes, looked across the table and smiled at him directly at his disguise; for he was not a grown-up, tall, broad, handsome man of thirty-two at all. In reality he was a shock-headed, slightly freckled urchin of nine or ten, by the name of "Smitty" on the town commons, and "Tod" at home.

"Aren't you becoming a trifle irritable of late, Tod?" she inquired with solicitude, wilfully suppressing a smile which flashed up in her as she remembered that ejaculation. It was shocking in a minister, of course, but she had ever contended that ministers were, and should be, made of clay; and clay is friable.

"Yes, mother, I believe I am," confessed Rev. Smith Boyd, considering the matter with serious impartiality.

Mrs. Boyd surveyed her son with a practiced eye.

"I think your appetite's dropping off a little," she commented, and then she was shrewdly silent, though the twinkles of humor came back to her eyes by and by. "I don't think you take enough social diversion," she finally advised him. "You should go out more. You should ride, walk, but always in the company of young and agreeable people. Because you are a rector is no reason for you to spend your spare time in gloomy solitude, as you have been doing for the past week."

Rev. Smith Boyd would have liked to state that he had been very busy, but he had a conscience, which was a nuisance to him. He had spent most of his spare time up in his study, with his chin in his hand.

"You are quite right, mother," he somberly confessed, and swallowed two spoonfuls of his soup. It was excellent soup, but, after taking a bite of a wafer, he laid his spoon on the edge of the plate.

"I think I'll drive you out of the house, Tod," Mrs. Boyd decided, in the same tones she had used to employ when she had sent him to bed. "I think I'll send you over to Sargent's tonight, to sing with Gail."

The rector of the richest church in the world flushed a trifle, and looked at the barley in the bottom of his soup. His mother regarded him quietly, and the twinkles went out of her eyes. She had been bound to get at the bottom of his irritability, and now she had arrived at it.

"I would prefer not to go," he told her stiffly, and the eyes which he lifted to her were coldly green. "I do not [illegible] of Miss Sargent."

He Laid Aside His Dignity and Got Down on His Hands and Knees.

[illegible] one second the rector [illegible] felt an impulse to shake [illegible] Gail Sargent was a young [illegible] any young [illegible] and what was the [illegible] with [illegible]. She was beginning to be [illegible] by the fact that, at the [illegible] of his head and made a [illegible] him [illegible] to the point of tight [illegible] pretty, over a girl.

"Why [illegible]" the voice of Mrs. Boyd was not cold [illegible] she [illegible] it to[illegible]. She had suddenly felt some tug of sympathy for Tod.

"Well, for one thing, she has a most disagreeable lack of reverence," he stated.

"Reverence?" and Mrs. Boyd knitted her brows. "I don't believe you quite understand her. She has the most beautifully simple religious faith that I have ever seen, Tod."

The Rev. Smith Boyd watched his soup disappearing, as if it were some curious moving object to which his attention had just been called.

"Miss Sargent claims to have a new religion," he observed. "She has said most unkind things about Market Square church. She says that it is a strictly commercial institution, and that its motive in desiring to build the new cathedral is vanity."

He omitted to mention Gail's further charge that his own motive in desiring the new cathedral was personal ambition. Candor did not compel that admission. It did not become him to act from piqued personal pride.

Mrs. Boyd studied him as he gazed somberly at his fish, and the twinkles once more returned to her eyes, as she made up her mind to cure Tod's irritability.

"I am ashamed of you," she told her son. "This girl is scarcely twenty. If I remember rightly, and I'm sure that I do, you came to me, at about twenty, and confessed to a logical disbelief in the theory of creation, which included, of course, a disbelief in the Creator. You were an infidel, an atheist. You were going to relinquish your studies and give up all thought of the church."

The deep red of the Rev. Smith Boyd's face testified to the truth of this cruel charge, and he pushed back his fish permanently.

"I most humbly confess," he stated, and indeed he had writhed in spirit many times over that remembrance. "However, mother, I have since discovered that to be a transitional stage through which every theological student passes."

"Yet you won't allow it to a girl," charged Mrs. Boyd, with the severity which she could much better have expressed with a laugh. "When you discover that this young lady, who seems to be in every way delightful, is so misled as to criticize the motives of Market Square church, you withdraw into your dignity, with the privilege of a layman, and announce that 'you do not approve of her.' What she needs, Tod, is religious instruction."

She had carefully ironed out the tiny little wrinkles around her blue eyes by the time her son looked up from the profound cogitation into which this reproof had thrown him.

"Mother, I have been wrong," he admitted, and he seemed ever so much brighter for the confession. He drew his fish toward him and ate it.

Later, the Rev. Smith Boyd presented himself at James Sargent's house, with a new light shining in his heart; and he had blue eyes. He had come to show Gail the way and the light. If she had doubts, and lack of faith, and flippant irreverence, it was his duty to be patient with her, for this was the fault of youth. He had been [illegible] himself.

Gail's eyelids drooped and the corners of her lips twitched when Rev. Smith Boyd's name was brought up to her, but she did her hair in an [illegible] high on her head instead of low on her neck, and then she [illegible] in her simple little dark [illegible] velvet cut round at the neck.

"I was afraid that your voice was cut," [illegible] Gail in a tone suggestive of the fact that that would be a tragedy indeed, and she began [illegible] forth music. "You haven't been over for so long."

Rev. Smith Boyd [illegible]. At [illegible] the way of spiritual instruction was quite difficult. Nevertheless, he had a duty to perform. Mechanically he had taken his place at the piano, standing straight and tall, and his blue eyes softened as they automatically fell on the piece of music she had opened. Of course it was their favorite, the one in which their voices had soared in the most perfect unison. Gail glanced up at him, as she brushed a purely imaginary fleck of dust from the keys. For an instant the brown eyes and the blue ones met. He was a tremendously nice fellow, after all. But what was worrying him?

"Before we sing I should like to take up graver matters," he began, feeling at a tremendous disadvantage in the presence of the music. To obviate this, he drew up a chair, and sat facing her. "I have called this evening in the capacity of your temporary rector."

Gail's eyelids had a tendency to flicker down, but she restrained them. She was adorable when she looked prim that way. Her lips were like a rosebud. Rev. Smith Boyd himself thought of the simile, and cast it behind him.

"You are most kind," she told him, suppressing the imps and demons which struggled to pop into her eyes.

"I have been greatly disturbed by the length to which your unbelief has apparently gone," the young rector went on, and having plunged into this opening he began to breathe more freely. This was familiar ground.

Gail rested a palm on the edge of the bench behind her, and leaned back facing him, supported on one beautifully modeled arm. Her face had set seriously now.

"However," went on the rector, "I do not expect to be able to remove the spiritual errors which I am compelled to judge that you have accumulated, by any other means than patient logic," he resumed. "May I discuss these matters with you?" His voice was grave and serious, and full of earnest sincerity, and the musical quality alone of it made patient, logical discussion seem attractive.

"If you like," she assented, smiling at him with willful deception. The wicked thought had occurred to her that it might be her own duty to broaden his spiritual understanding.

"Thank you," he accepted gravely. "If you will give me an hour or so each week, I shall be very happy."

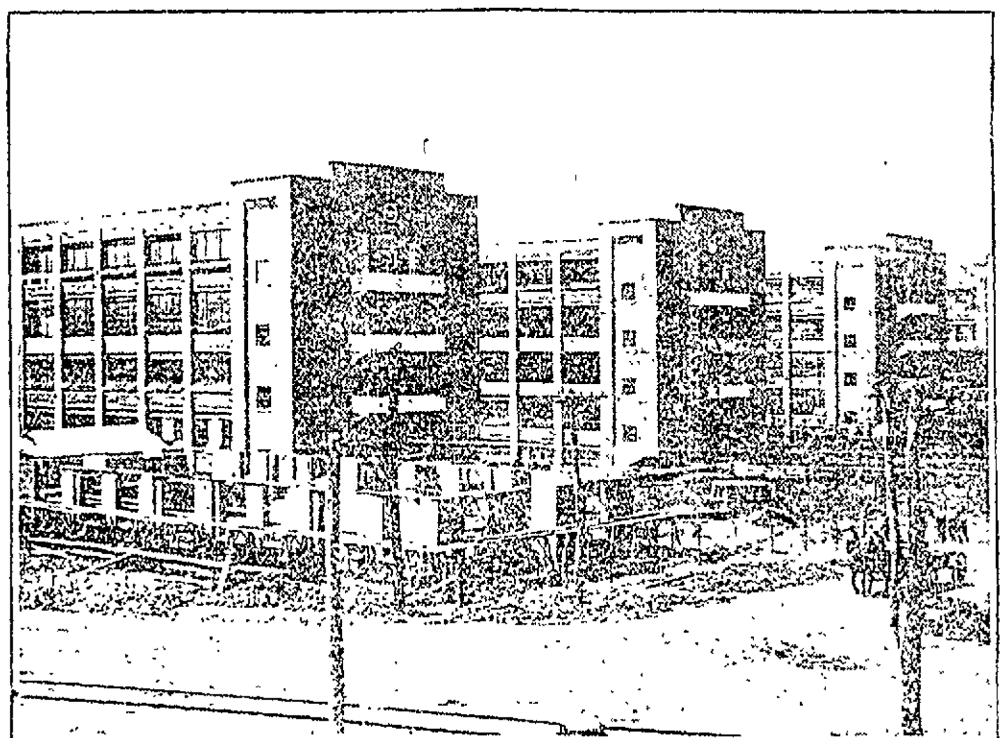

"I am nearly always at home on Tuesday and Friday evenings," suggested Gail. "Scarcely anyone calls before eight-thirty, and we have dinner quite early on those evenings." She began to be sincerely interested in the project. She had never given herself time to quite exactly define her own attitude towards theology as distinct from religion, and she felt that she should do it, if for no other reason than to avoid making impulsive overstatements. Rev. Smith Boyd would help her to look squarely into her own mind and her own soul, for he had a very active intelligence, and was, moreover, the most humanly forceful cleric she had ever met. Besides, they could always finish by singing.

"I shall make arrangements to be over as early as you will permit," declared the rector [illegible] with the idea. "We shall [illegible] very [illegible] by step [illegible] justification of the [illegible] revolution [illegible] the world."

"I should like nothing better," mused Gail, and when Rev. Smith Boyd rose and stood behind her she filled her lungs [illegible] to the piano and struck a [illegible] chord, which she trailed off into a tinkling little run by way of friendly greeting to the piano.

DAVIDSON LOSES A CLOSE GAME TO LEISENRING RIVALS

Wild Throw in Sixth Inning Responsible for Defeat.

OWENSDALE NEXT ATTRACTION

Davidson and Owensdale to Meet During Festival on Saturday and Married Men Are to Clash With the Big Team in a Comedy Contest After.

Leisenring defeated Davidson at Leisenring last night by a score of 5 to 4 in a seven inning game. Davidson played a fine game throughout and held Leisenring defeated until the sixth inning when a wild throw was responsible for two runs.

Davidson will hold a festival on Saturday. Owensdale will clash with the Davidson team at 5 o'clock sharp and after that the married men of Davidson works will play the regular team. The score:

BAGGALEY BEATEN

Is Defeated 5 to 0 by the East United Team.

Special to The Courier.

BAGGALEY, July 28.—Baggaley was whitewashed here yesterday by United by the score of 5 to 0. The game was well played by both teams. In the first inning United scored two runs on Smith's home run, John Tobash's two bagger and Spicki's single. United scored three more in the eighth on a single by Joe Tobash, a single by Smith, a two bagger by John Tobash and a passed ball.

The feature was the fine pitching of Stillman, the famous spitball pitcher. He allowed but four hits during the game. Baggaley's heavy hitters (Shine and Hardy) didn't get a hit off Stillman. Stillman fanned Shine twice and Hardy three times. The score:
